DOCTOR Birch, in his summary of Sir Thomas Edmond's State-papers, has published a short extract from the following obsolete Author, which, for the elegance of the Latin, and the remarkable description of queen Elizabeth, has been deservedly admired: Her best portraits scarcely exhibit a more lively image.

The

The original work, of which perhaps there are not above four, or five copies in England, is an itinerary through Germany, England, France, and Italy, performed by Hentzner, a travelling tutor to a young German nobleman. That Dr. Birch has extracted the most interesting passage in the whole book, is certain: Yet it records some circumstances and customs, not unworthy the notice of an English Antiquarian, and which are mentioned no where else. For these reasons, I flatter myself, that a publication of the part relating to our own country, might not be an unacceptable present to persons of curiosity. The translation, was the production of the idle hours of another Gentleman.

The Author seems to have had that laborious, and indiscriminate passion for SEEING, which is remarked in his countrymen ; and as his Translator observed, enjoyed as much the doubtful

doubtful head, of a more doubtful faint in pickle, as any upon the shoulders of the best Grecian statue. Fortunately so memorable a personage as queen Elizabeth, happened to fall under his notice.-----Ten years later, he would have been as accurate in painting Anne of Denmark !

The excess of respectful ceremonial used at decking her Majesty's table, though not in her presence, and the kind of adoration and genuflection paid to

With regard to the orthography of proper Names, though corrected in the translation, I have left them in the original as I found them-----

Accuracy in that particular, was not the Author's merit: It is a merit peculiar to Englishmen: The French are negligent of it to an affectation; yet the author of Les Melanges Historiques complains that other nations corrupt French names! He himself gives some English ones in

p. 247, 248. which it is impossible to decypher. Bassompierre calls York-house, Jorchaux, and Kensington, Inhimthort. As a soldier and embassador, he was not obliged to know the names of Houses; when he turned author, there was no excuse for not being intelligible. Even Voltaire, who writes the language so well, is careless in our titles. In England, it is the defect of a servant to blunder in proper names. It is one of those silly pretensions to her person, approach to Eastern homage. When we observe such worship offered to an old Woman, with bare neck, black teeth, and false red hair, it makes one smile; but makes one reflect what masculine sense was couched under those weakneses, and which could command such awe from a nation like England!

Not to anticipate the entertainment of the reader, I shall make but one more reflection.

We

We are apt to think that Sir William Temple, and king William, were in a manner the introducers of gardening into England: By the description of lord Burleigh's gardens at Theobalds, and of those at Nonfuch, we find that the magnificent, though false taste, was known here as early as the reigns of Henry VIII. and his Daughter. There is scarce an unnatural and sumptuous impropriety at Versailles, which we do not find in Hentzner's description of the gardens above-mentioned. With AD oppidulum Rye, ubi portus est Angliæ, pervenimus. Quam primùm hic nave essemus egressi, Notario loci nomina nostra dedimus, prius tamen interrogati, quid negotii nobis in hoc Regno futurum? Ubi responsum esset, nos insulæ perlustrandæ gratiâ solummodò huc advenisse, in diverforium deducti, & pro Regionis more, benè & lautè fuimus habiti.

to politeness, which nations that affect a superiority, have always cultivated---For in all affectations, defects are merits. The readers of history love certainty: It is pity the writers do not. What confusion would it have saved, if it had not been the custom of the Jews to call every Darius and Artaxerxes, Ahafuerus! It were to be wished, that all nations would be content to use the appellations which people, or respective countries have chosen for themselves. Proper names ought

ought never to be tortured to any particular idiom. What a ridiculous composition is Aulugel! Who can conceive that Meylandt, signifies Milan; or Leghorn, Livorno? When one is misled by a proper name, the only use of which is to direct, one feels like the Countryman, who complained, That the houses hindered him from seeing Paris.-----The thing becomes an obstruction to itself,

HENTZNER'S

TRAVELS.

WE arrived at Rye, a small English sea-port. Here, as soon as we came on shore, we gave in our names to the Notary of the place, but not till he had demanded our business; and being answered, That we had none but to see England: We were conducted to an inn, where, we were very well entertained; as one generally is in this country.

We took post horses for London: It is surprizing how swiftly they run, their bridles are very light, and their saddles, little more than a span over.

LONDON, the head and metropolis of England: Called by Tacitus, LONDINIUM; by Ptolomey, LONGIDINIUM; by Ammianus Marcellinus, LUNDINIUM; by foreigners, LONDRA, and LONDRES; is the seat of the British empire, and the chamber of the English kings. This most antient city, is in the county of Middlesex, the fruitfullest and wholesomest soil in England. It is built upon the river Thames, 60 miles from the sea, and was originally founded, as all historians agree, by Brutus, who coming from Greece into Italy, thence into Africa, next into France, and last into Britain, niens, ad Thamesim fluvium, situ & oportunitate loci adductus, urbem condidit, TROJAMQUE NOVAM appellavit, quæ tandem per corruptionem TRINOVANTUM fuit appellata. At, postquam Lud, frater Cassibilauni, sive Cassivellauni, qui cum Julio Cæsare dimicavit, cujus ipsemet Cæsar meminit, lib. 5. de Bell. Gall. regni gubernacula adeptus est, cinxit eam nobilissimis muris, & turribus, arte mirâ fabricatis, & de nomine suo jussit eam dici, CAIER LUD, id est Civitas Lud; deinde per corruptionem nominis CÆRLUNDA; & succedente tempore, per commutationem linguarum, LUNDENE, ac postea LUNDRES, dicta fuit. Mortuus tandem Lud, in hac urbe sepultus est, juxta portam illam, quæ hoc etiam tempore, POR LUD, Britannicè, Saxonicè verò LUDESGATE nuncupatur.

chose this situation, for the convenience of the river, calling it TROJA NOVA, which name was afterwards corrupted into TRINOVA. But when Lud, the brother of Cassibilan, or Cassivelan, who warred against Julius Cæsar, as he himself mentions, lib. 5. de Bell. Gall. came to the crown, he encompassed it with very strong walls, and towers very artfully constructed, and from his own name called it CAIER LUD, i. e. Lud's City. This name was corrupted into that of CÆRLUNDA, and again in time by change of language, into LUNDRES. Lud, when he died, was buried in this town, near that gate which is yet called in Welch, POR LUD, in Saxon, LUDESGATE.

The famous river Thames, owes part of its stream, as well as of its appellation, to the Isis; rising a little above Winchelcomb, and being encreased with several rivulets, unites both its waters, and its name to the Thame, on the other side of Oxford, thence after passing by London, and being of the utmost utility, from its greatness and navigation, it opens into a vast arm of the sea, from whence the tide, according to Gemma Frisius, flows and ebbs to the distance of 80 miles, twice in 25 hours, and according to Polydore Virgil, above 60 miles, twice in 24 hours.

This city being very large of itself, has very extensive suburbs, and a fort, called the Tower, of beautiful structure. It is magnificently ornamented, with public buildings and churches, of which there are above 120 parochial.

On the South, is a bridge of stone, 800 feet in length, of wonderful work; it is supported upon 20 piers of square stone, 60 feet high, and 30 broad, joined by arches of about 20 feet diameter. The whole is covered on each side with houses, so disposed, as to have the appearance of a continued street, not at all of a bridge.

Paulus Iovius, in his description of the most remarkable towns in England, says, all are obscured by London : Which in the opinion of many is Cæsar's city of the Trinobantes, the capital of all Britain, famous for the commerce of many nations ; it's houses are elegantly built, it's churches fine, it's towns strong, and it's riches and abundance surprizing. The wealth of the world is wafted to it by the Thames, swelled by the tide, and navigable to merchant ships, through a safe and deep channel for 60 miles, from its mouth to the city : It's banks are every where beautified with fine country seats, woods, and farms ; below, is the royal palace of Greenwich ; above, that of Richmond; and between both, on the West of London, rise the noble buildings of Westminster, most remarkable for the courts of Justice, the Parliament, and St. Peter's church, enriched with the royal tombs. At the distance of 20 miles from London, is the castle of Windsor, a most delightful retreat of the kings of England, as well as famous for several of their tombs, and for the ceremonial of the Order of the Garter. This river abounds in Swans, swimming in flocks; the sight of them, and their noise, is vastly agreeable to the fleets that meet them in their course. It is joined to the city by a bridge of stone, wonderfully built; is never encreased by any rains, rising only with the tide, and is every where spread with nets, for the taking of Salmon and Shad. Thus far Paulus Iovius.

Polydore Virgil affirms, that London has continued to be a royal city, and the capital of the kingdom, crowded with its own inhabitants and foreigners, abounding in riches, and famous for its great trade, from the time of king Archeninus, or Erchenvinus. Here the kings are crowned, and solemnly inaugurated, and the council of the nation, or Parliament is held. The government of the city is lodged by antient grant of the kings of Britain, in 24 Aldermen, that is, Seniors: These annually elect out of their own body a Mayor, and two Sheriffs, who determine causes according to the municipal laws. It has always had, as indeed Britain in general, a great number of men of learning, much distinguished for their writings.

The walls are pierced with six gates, which as they were rebuilt, acquired new names. Two look Eastward:

I. LUDGATE, the oldest, so called from king Lud, whose name is yet to be seen, cut into the stone over the arch on one side; though others imagine it rather to have been named Fludgate, from a stream over which it stands, like the Porta Fluentana at Rome. It has been lately repaired by queen Elizabeth, whose statue is placed on the opposite side. And

He was thrice married, first to Blanch, Daughter and Heiress of Henry Duke of Lancaster; by her he received an immense Inheritance, and became not only Duke of Lancaster, but Earl of Leiceſter, Lincoln, and Derby, of whose Race are descended many Emperors, Kings, Princes, and Nobles. All which came to pass, as predicted by the Saint; for after being worsted and put to flight by Sueno king of the Danes, and his son Canute; and at last closely besieged in London, he died miserably A. D. 1017, after he had reigned 36 years in great difficulties.

There is besides in the middle of the church a tomb made of brass, of some Bishop of London, named William, who was in favour with Edward king of England, and afterwards was made counsellor to king William. He was Bishop 16 years, and died A. D. 1077. Near this, is the following inscription:

lower part of it, is this inscription in gold letters ;

Thomas Linacre, Physician to king Henry VIII. a Man learned in the Greek and Latin Languages, and particularly skilful in Physick, by which he restored many from a State of languishment and despair to Life. He translated with extraordinary Eloquence many of Galen's Works into Latin ; and published, a little before his Death, at the request of his Friends, a very valuable Book on the correct Structure of the Latin Tongue. He founded in perpetuity in favour of Students in Physick, two public Lectures at Oxford, and one at Cambridge. In this City he brought about by his own Industry the establishing of a College of Physicians, of which he was elected the first President. He was a detester of all Fraud and Deceit, and faithful in his Friendships ; equally dear to Men of all Ranks : He went into Orders a few Years before his Death, and quitted this Life full of Years, and much lamented, A. There are many tombs in this church, but without any inscriptions. It has a very fine Organ, which at evening prayer, accompanied with other instruments, is delightful.

In the suburb to the West, joined to the city by a continued row of palaces belonging to the chief nobility, of a mile in length, and lying on the side next the Thames, is the small town of WESTMINSTER; originally called THORNEY from it's thorn bushes, but now WESTMINSTER, from it's aspect and it's Monastery. The church is remarkable for the coronation, and the burial of the kings of England: Upon this spot is said formerly to have stood a temple of Apollo, which was thrown down by an earthquake in the time of Antoninus Pius; from the ruins of which Sebert king of the East-Saxons erected another to St. Peter: This was subverted by the Danes, and again renewed by bishop Dunstan, who gave it to a few Monks. Afterwards, king Edward the Confessor built decimis omnium suorum reddituum de integro construxit, & patrimoniis totâ Angliâ dispersis ditavit.

In hoc templo, notatu digna sunt sequentia :

In primo Choro est tumulus Annæ Clivenfis uxoris Henrici VIII. absque inscriptione.

Ex opposito sunt sepulchra duo lapidea :
 I. Edmundi Comitis Lancastriæ, fratris Edwardi I. II. Admeri de Valentiâ, Comitis Benbrochiæ, filii Gulielmi de Valentiâ. His adjunctum est III. ex marmore albo, Avelinæ Comitissæ Lancastriæ.

In secundo Choro videtur sella, in quâ reges inaugurationis tempore sedent; huic inclusus esse dicitur lapis Patriarchæ Jacobi, supra quem dormiens recumbebat, cum haberet somnium de scalâ ad cœlum usque pertingente; adjectæ tabellæ hi versus sunt inscripti :

In this church, the following things are worthy of notice :

In the first Choir, the tomb of Anne of Cleves, wife of Henry VIII. without any inscription.

On the opposite side are two stone sepulchres. I. Edward, Earl of Lancaster, brother of Edward I. II. Ademar of Valence, Earl of Pembroke, son of Ademar of Valence. Joining to these is a III. of Aveline Countess of Lancaster.

In the second Choir is the chair on which the kings are seated, when they are crowned; in it is enclosed a stone, said to be that on which the Patriarch Jacob slept, when he dreamed he saw a ladder reaching quite up in-

That if any Faith is to be given to ancient Chronicles, a Stone of great Note is inclosed in this Chair, being the same on which the Patriarch Jacob reposed, when he beheld the miraculous descent of Angels. Edward I. the Mars and Hector of England, having conquered Scotland, brought it from thence.

The tomb of Richard II. and his wife, of brass gilt, and these verses written round it:

Perfect and Prudent, Richard, by right the Vanquish'd by Fortune, lies here now

True of his Word, and thereto well resound;

War is delightful to the unexperienced.

It was this Henry, who 160 years after Edward the Confessor had built this church, took it down, and raised an entire new one of beautiful architecture, supported by rows of marble columns, and its roof covered with sheets of lead, a work of 50 years before its completion. It has been much enlarged at the West end by the Abbots. After the expulsion of the Monks, it experienced many changes ; first it had a Dean and Prebendaries ; then a Bishop, who having squandered the revenues, resigned it again to a Dean. In a little time, the Monks with their Abbot were reinstated by queen Mary ; but they being soon ejected again by authority of Parliament, it was converted into a Cathedral Church ; nay, into a seminary for the Church,

The third Choir, of surprizing splendor and elegance, was added to the East end by Henry VII. for a burying place for himself and his posterity. Here is to be seen his magnificent tomb, wrought of brass and marble, with this epitaph :

Here lies Henry VII. of that Name, formerly King of England, Son of Edmund Earl of Richmond, who ascending the Throne on the 22d Day of August, was crowned on the 30th of October following at Westminster, in the Year of our Lord 1485. He died on the 21st of April, in the 53d Year of his Age, after a Reign of 22 Years, and 8 Months, wanting a Day.

This monument is inclosed with rails of brass, with a long epitaph in Latin verse.

Under the same tomb lies buried Edward VI. King of England, Son of Henry VIII. by Jane Seymour. He succeeded to his Father when he was but 9 years old, and died A. D. 1553, on the 6th of July, in the 16th

Mary was proclaimed Queen by the People, on the 19th of July, and died in November, 1558, and is buried in some corner of the same Choir, without any inscription.

Queen Elizabeth.

Here lies Queen Elizabeth, Daughter of Edward IV. Sister of King Edward V. Wife of Henry VII. and the glorious Mother of Henry VIII. She died in the Tower of London, on the 11th of February, A. D. 1502, in the 37th Year of her Age.

Near to this church is WESTMINSTER-HALL, where besides the Sessions of Parliament, which are often held there, are the Courts of Justice; and at stated times are heard there trials in Law, or concerning the King's patrimony; or in Chancery, which moderates the severity of the common Law by Equity. by king Richard II. in the place of an ancient one which he caused to be taken down. He made it part of his habitation, (for at that time the kings of England determined causes in their own proper Person, and from the days of Edward the Confessor, had their palace adjoining) till above 60 years since, upon it's being burnt, Henry VIII. removed the royal residence to WHITEHALL, situated in the neighbourhood, which a little before was the house of Cardinal Wolsey: This palace is truly Royal; inclosed on one side by the Thames, on the other by a Park, which connects it with St. JAMES'S, another royal palace.

In the Chamber where the Parliament is usually held, the seats and wainscot are made of wood, the growth of Ireland; said to have that occult quality, that all poisonous animals are driven away by it: And it is affirmed for certain, that in Ireland there are neither serpents, toads, nor any other venomous creature to be found.

X. A piece of clock-work, an Æthiopian riding upon a Rhinoceros, with four attendants, who all make their obeisance, when it strikes the hour; these are all put into motion by winding up the machine.

At the entrance into the Park from Whitehall is this inscription:

But the unfortunate Actæon always presses on.

The chaste Virgin naturally pitied:

But the powerful Goddess revenged the wrong.

May Diana live the care of Heaven;

The delight of Mortals;

The security of those that belong to Her!

In this Park is great plenty of Deer.

In a garden joining to this palace, there is a Jet d'eau, with a sun-dial, which while strangers are looking at, a quantity of water, forced by a wheel, which the gardiner turns at a distance, through a number of little pipes, plentifully sprinkles those that are standing round.

king John gave a power by grant, of chusing annually a Mayor, from any of the twelve principal Companies, and to name two Sheriffs, one of which to be called the King's, the other, the City's. It is scarce credible how this city encreased, both in public and private buildings, upon establishing this form of government. Vide Cambden's Britan. Middlesex.

It is worthy of observation, that every year upon St. Bartholemew's day, when the Fair is held, it is usual for the Mayor, attended by the 12 principal Aldermen, to walk in a neighbouring field, dressed in his scarlet gown, and about his neck a golden chain, to which is hung a * Golden Fleece, and besides, that † particular ornament, which distinguishes the most noble Order of the Garter. When the Mayor goes out of the precincts of the city, a scepter, a sword, and a cap, are born before him, and he is followed by the principal Aldermen in scarlet gowns, with gold chains; himself and they on horse-back: Upon their arrival at a place appointed for that purpose, where a tent is pitched, the mob begin to wrestle before them, two at a time; the conquerors receive rewards from the Magistrates. After this is over, a parcel of live Rabbits are turned loose among the crowd, which are pursued by a number of boys, who endeavour to catch them, with all the noise they can make. While we were at this shew, one of our company, Thobias Salander, Doctor of Physic, had his pocket picked of his purse, with nine crowns du soleil, which without doubt was so cleverly taken from him, by an Englishman who always kept very close to him, that the Doctor did not in the least perceive it.

The CASTLE, or TOWER of LONDON, called BRINGWIN, and TOURGWIN, in Welch, from it's whiteness, is encompassed by a very deep and broad ditch, as well as a double wall very high. In the middle of the whole is that very antient and very strong Tower, enclosed with four others, which in the opinion of some, was built by Julius Cæsar. Upon entering the Tower, we were obliged to quit our swords at the gate, and deliver them to the guard. When we were introduced, we were shewn above a hundred pieces of arras belonging to the crown, made of gold, silver, and silk; several saddles covered with velvet of different colours; an immense quantity of bed-furniture, such as canopies, and the like, some of them most richly ornamented with pearl; some royal dresses, so extremely magnificent, as to raise any one's admiration at the sums they must have cost. We were next led into the Armoury, in which are these particularities: Spears, out of which you may shoot; shields, that will give fire four times; a great many rich halberds, commonferico rubro, & viridí tectæ, cum Henrici VIII. Angliæ regis armaturâ; arma multa ac egregia, tam pro viris, quam pro equis in equeſtri pugnâ; lancea Caroli Branden Suffolciæ, quæ tres ſpithamos craſſa erat; tormenta duo, ex quorum altero tres, ex altero ſeptem globi poſſunt explodi; duo tormenta lignea magnitudinis immenſæ, quibus Angli in oppugnatione Boloniæ, Galliæ oppidi, aliquando ſunt uſi; quo ſtratagemate, cum aliàs impoſſibile fuiſſet, cum ejuſcemodi tormentis appropinquare ad oppidum, Bolonicenſes territi, ſeſe ſub certis conditionibus dediderunt; XIX. tormenta craſſiora; & XXXVI. quodam modo minora, erant in camerâ peculiari; alia item tormenta, ex quibus catenæ, globulique frangendis navium malis apti exploduntur. Baſiſtæ, arcus, ſagittæ, quibus etiamnum hodie in exercitiis uti ſolent Angli magno numero: Et quis omnia referre queat? Expolitioni autem rerum harum bellicarum omnium, vix octo vel novem viri quotannis ſufficiunt.

ly called partuifans, with which the guard defend the Royal person in battle; some lances, covered with red and green velvet, and the body-armour of Henry VIII.; many, and very beautiful arms, as well for men, as for horses in horse-fights; the lance of Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, three spans thick; two pieces of canon, the one fires three, the other seven balls at a time; two others made of wood, which the English had at the siege of Boulogne, in France, and by this stratagem, without which they could not have succeeded, they struck a terror into the inhabitants, as at the appearance of artillery, and the town was surrendered upon articles; 19 canon, of a thicker make than ordinary, and in a room apart; 36 of a smaller; other canon for chain-shot; and balls proper to bring down masts of ships. Cross-bows, bows and arrows, of which to this day the English make great use in their exercises: But who can relate all that is to be seen here? Eight or nine men, employed by the year, are scarce sufficient to keep all the arms bright.

Officina prætereà est in hac arce monetaria, cudendis regiis nummis occupata.

N. B. Notandum hic, quod si quis ex illustriore familiâ facinus aliquod magnum perpetret morte dignum, crimen nimirum læsæ majestatis, aut simile quid, is huic arci includitur, & rarissimum est, ut inde liberetur, & salvus dimittatur. Hic decapitata fuit Anna Bolenia Henrici VIII, Angliæ regis conjunx, ibidemque in Sacello sepulta, sed absque inscriptione: Regina quoque Elisabetha in hoc ergastulo captiva fuit detenta à sorore Mariâ Angliæ reginâ, quâ tandem vitâ defunctâ, inde liberata, atque ad regni gubernationem legitimè fuit evocata.

Egressi ex hac arce in domunculam propinquam concessimus, in quâ diversi generis aluntur animalia, tres videlicet Leænæ, & Leo unus ingentis magnitudinis, quem Edvardum sextum vocitant, eo quod regis istius tempore natus hic sit, Tigris, Lynx, Lupus, valdè annosus, quod rarissimum in Angliâ animal, unde

The Mint for coining money is in the Tower.

N. B. It is to be noted, that when any of the nobility are sent hither, on the charge of high crimes, punishable with death, such as treason, &c. they seldom or never recover their liberty. Here was beheaded Anna Bolen, wife of king Henry VIII. and lies buried in the Chapel, but without any inscription: And queen Elizabeth was kept prisoner here by her sister queen Mary, at whose death she was enlarged, and by right called to the throne.

On coming out of the Tower, we were led to a small house close by, where are kept variety of creatures, viz. three Lionesses, one Lion of great size, called Edward VI. from his having been born in that reign; a Tyger, a Lynx; a Wolf, excessively old; this is a very scarce animal in England, so that their sheep and cattle stray about in great numbers, free from any danger, though without any

etiam numerosi ovium greges & armenta hinc inde absque custodibus impunè oberrant ; item Histris, Aquila : Atque hæc animalia omnia in loco remotiori, & ad hanc rem designato, clathris ligneis circumsepta, Reginae sumptibus aluntur.

Prope hanc arcem, area est fatis ampla, in cujus eminentiore loco contabulatio lignea erecta est, suppliciiis illustrium destinata, super quâ tres Angliæ principes, suæ familæ ultimos, læsæ majestatis reos, decollatos esse fertur : In ripâ Thamesis fluvii huic arci contiguâ, plurima videntur tormenta, & ænea, & ferrea, quorum præcipuus in mari est usus.

Visu deinde & notatu dignum quoque est in hâc urbe peristylium sive Janum medium, Burfam vulgus, regina Elisabetha EXCAMBIUM REGIUM dixit, ad negotiatorum usum & urbis ornamentum, à Thoma Greshamo Equestris ordinis cive positum ; magnificam illud quidem, sive ædificii structuram, sive gentium frequentiam, sive mercium copiam spectes ; ut etiam Hansiaticæ Societatis domum omittam, & aquas, subterraneis cuniculis, & syphonibus, body to keep them ; there is besides, a Porcupine, and an Eagle : All these creatures are kept in a remote place, fitted up for the purpose with wooden lattices, at the Queen's expence.

Near to this Tower, is a large open space, on the highest part of it is erected a wooden scaffold, for the execution of noble criminals ; upon which they say, three princes of England, the last of their families, have been beheaded for high treason : On the bank of the Thames close by, are a great many cannon, such chiefly as are used at sea.

The next thing worthy of note, is the ROYAL EXCHANGE, so named by queen Elizabeth, built by Sir Thomas Gresham, Citizen, for public ornament, and the convenience of merchants. It has a great effect, whether you consider the stateliness of the building, the assemblage of different nations, or the quantities of merchandise. I shall say nothing of the hall belonging to the Hans Society ;

Without the city are some THEATRES, where English Actors represent almost every day Tragedies and Comedies to very numerous audiences; these are concluded with excellent music, variety of dances, and the excessive applause of those that are present.

Not far from one of these Theatres, which are all built of wood, lies the Royal Barge, Est & alius postea locus Theatri quoque formam habens, Ursorum & Taurorum venationibus destinatus, qui à posticâ parte alligati à magnis illis canibus & molossis Anglicis, quos linguâ vernaculâ docten appellant, mirè exagitantur, ita tamen, ut sæpè canes isti ab Ursis vel Tauris dentibus arrepti, vel cornibus impetiti, de vitâ periclitari, aliquando etiam animam exhalare soleant, quibus sic vel lassis statim substituuntur alii recentes & magis alacres. close to the river ; it has two splendid cabbins, beautifully ornamented with glass windows, painting and gilding ; it is kept upon dry ground, and sheltered from the weather.

There is still another place, built in the form of a Theatre, which serves for the baiting of Bulls and Bears, they are fastened behind, and then worried by great English bulldogs ; but not without great risque to the dogs, from the horns of the one, and the teeth of the other ; and it sometimes happens they are killed upon the spot ; fresh ones are immediately supplied in the places of those that are wounded, or tired. To this entertainment, there often follows that of whipping a blinded Bear, which is performed by five or six men, standing circularly with whips, which they exercise upon him without any mercy, as he cannot escape from them because of his chain ; he defends himself with all his force and skill, throwing down all who come within his reach, and are not active enough to get out of it, and tearing the

At these spectacles, and every where else, the English are constantly smoaking Tobacco, and in this manner; they have pipes on purpose made of clay, into the farther end of which they put the herb, so dry that it may be rubbed into powder, and putting fire to it, they draw the smoak into their mouths, which they puff out again, through their nostrils, like funnels, along with it plenty of phlegm and defluxion from the head. In these theatres fruits, such as apples, pears and nuts, according to the season, are carried about to be sold, as well as ale and wine.

There are fifteen COLLEGES, within and without the city, nobly built, with beautiful gardens adjoining. Of these the three principal are :

In these Colleges numbers of the young nobility, gentry, and others, are educated, and chiefly in the study of physic, for very few apply themselves to that of the law: They are allowed a very good table, and silver cups to drink out off. Once a person of distinction, who could not help being surprized at the great number of cups, said, "He should have thought it more suitable to the life of Students, if they had used rather glass, or earthen-ware, than silver." The College answered, "They were ready to make him a present of all their plate; provided he would undertake to supply them with all the glass, and earthen-ware, they should have a demand for; since it was very likely he would find the expence, from constant breaking, exceed the value of the silver."

The streets in this city are very handsome and clean ; but that which is named from the gold-smiths who inhabit it, surpasses all the rest : There is in it a gilt Tower, with a fountain that plays. Near it on the farther side is a handsome house, built by a goldsmith, and presented by him to the city. There are besides to be seen in this street, as in all others where there are gold-smiths shops, all sorts of gold and silver vessels exposed to sale ; as well as antient and modern medals, in such quantities as must surprize a man the first time he sees and considers them.

Fitz-Stephens, a writer of English history, reckoned in his time in London, 127 parish Churches, and 13 belonging to Convents : He mentions besides, that upon a review there of men able to bear arms, the people brought into the field under their colours, 40,000 foot, and 20,000 horse. *Vide Cambden's Britan. We arrived next at the royal palace of GREENWICH, reported to have been originally built by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, and to have received very magnificent additions from Henry VII. It was here Elizabeth, the present queen, was born, and here she generally resides; particularly in summer, for the delightfulness of it's situation. We were admitted by an order Mr. Rogers had procured from the Lord Chamberlain, into the Presence-Chamber, hung with rich tapestry, and the floor after the English fashion, strewed with * hay, through which the Queen commonly passes in her way to chapel: At the door stood a Gentleman dressed in velvet, with a gold chain, whose office was

In the same hall were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, a great number of Counsellors of State, Officers of the Crown, and Gentlemen, who waited the Queen's coming out; which she did from her own apartment, when it was time to go to Prayers, attended in the following manner:

First went Gentlemen, Barons, Earls, Knights of the Garter, all richly dressed and bare-headed; next came the Chancellor, bearing the Seals in a red-silk Purse, between Two; one of which carried the Royal Scepter, the other the Sword of State, in a red scabbard, studded with golden Fleurs de Lis, the point upwards: Next came the Queen, in the Sixty-fifth Year of her Age, as we were told, very majestic; her Face oblong, fair, but wrinkled; her Eyes small, yet black and pleasant; her Nose a little hooked; her Lips narrow, and her Teeth black; (a defect

But while she was still at Prayers, we saw her Table set out with the following Solemnity:

A Gentleman entered the room bearing a rod, and along with him another who had a table-cloth, which after they had both knelt three times, with the utmost veneration, he spread upon the table, and after kneeling again, they both retired. Then came two others, one with the rod again, the other with a salt-feller, a plate, and bread; when they had kneeled, as the others had done, and placed what was brought upon the table, they too retired with the same ceremonies performed by the first. At last came an unmarried Lady, (we were told she was a Countess) and along with her a married one, bearing a tasting-knife; the former was dressed in white silk, who when she had prostrated herself three times, in the most graceful manner approached the table, and rubbed the plates with bread and salt, with as much awe, as if the Queen had been present: When they had waited there a little while, the Yeomen of the Guard entered, bare-headed, cloathed in scarlet, with a golden rose upon their backs, bringing in at each turn a course of twenty-four dishes, served in plate most of it gilt; these dishes were received by a Gentleman in the same order they were brought, and placed upon the table, while the Lady-Taster gave to each of the guard a mouthful to eat, of the particular dish he had brought, for fear of any poison. During the time that this guard, which consists of the tallest and stoutest men that can

At the end of all this ceremonial a number of unmarried Ladies appeared, who with particular solemnity lifted the meat off the table, and conveyed it into the Queen's inner and more private chamber, where after she had chosen for herself, the rest goes to the Ladies of the Court.

The Queen dines and sups alone with very few attendance; and it is very seldom that any body, foreigner or native, is admitted at that time, and then only at the intercession of somebody in power.

Near this palace is the Queen's Park stocked with deer: Such Parks are common throughout England, belonging to those that are distinguished either for their rank or riches. In the middle of this is an old square Tower, called MIREFLEUR, supposed to be that mentioned in the romance of Amadis de Gaul; and joining to it a plain, where Knights and Beyond this bridge is an antient and large Castle, said to be built by the Danes: On this side, where far the greater part of the town stands, all is splendid; the streets fine, the churches numerous, and those seats of the Muses, the Colleges, most beautiful; in these a great number of learned men are supported, and the studies of all polite sciences and languages flourish.

I think proper to mention some few things about the foundation of this University, and it's Colleges. Cantaber, a Spaniard, is thought to have first instituted this Academy, 375 Years before Christ; and Sebert king of the East-Angles, to have restored it, A. D. 630. It was afterwards subverted in the confusion under the Danes, and lay long neglected; till upon the Norman conquest every thing began to brighten up again: From that time, Inns and Halls for the convenient lodging of Students began to be built, but without any revenues annexed to them.

This town is watered by two rivers, the Cherwell, and the Isis, vulgarly called the Ouse ; and though these streams join in the same channel, yet the Isis runs more entire, and with more rapidity towards the South, retaining it's name, till it meets the Thame, which it seems long to have sought, at Wallingford, thence called by the compound name of Thames, it flows the prince of all British rivers ; of whom we may justly say, as the antients did of the Euphrates, That it both sows and waters England.

Collegium,

Winchester, a noble edifice, finely situated, and delightful for it's walks: At the same time Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, that great encourager of Learning, built the Divinity School very splendidly, and over it a Library, to which he gave an hundred and twenty-nine very choice books, purchased at a great price from Italy, but the public has long since been robbed of the use of them by the avarice of particulars: Lincoln College; All-Souls College; St. Bernard's College; Brazen-Nose College, founded by William Smith, Bishop of Lincoln, in the reign of Henry VII. it's revenues were augmented by Alexander Nowell, Dean of St. Paul's, London; upon the gate of this College is fixed a Nose of brass: Corpus Christi College built by Richard Fox Bishop of Winchester, under his picture in the College Chapel are lines importing that it is the exact representation of his person and dress, Collegium Christi Thomas Wolfæus, Cardinalis Eboracensis, ubi Fridesvidæ Monasterium erat, omnium amplissimum & elegantissimum inchoavit, quod Henricus VIII. Angliæ rex, adjuncto Cantuariensi Collegio, magnis redditibus ditavit, & Ædem Christi dixit: Potentissimusque item princeps pecuniâ è suo ærario depromtâ, ad oppidi dignitatem Episcopum & ad Academiæ ornamentum publicos Professores instituit.

Collegium Jesu ab Hugone Priso, Legum Doctore, exædificatum.

Maria etiam Regina Publicas Scholas bellè à fundamentis ædificavit, et variis inscriptionibus decoravit.

Hactenus de Collegiis & Aulis, quæ elegantî structurâ, opimis redditibus, & instructis Bibliothecis ita florent, ut reliquas orbis Christiani Academiâs superent omnes. Nunc de personis Academicis ibi viventibus pauca subjicienda.

Christ's Church, the largest and most elegant of them all, was begun on the ground of St. Frideswide's Monastery by Thomas Wolsey Cardinal of York; to which Henry VIII. joined Canterbury College, settled great revenues upon it, and named it Christ's Church: The same great Prince, out of his own treasury, to the dignity of the town, and ornament of the university, made the one a Bishoprick, and instituted Professorships in the other.

Jesus College, built by Hugh Price Doctor of Laws.

That fine edifice, The Public Schools, was entirely raised by Queen Mary, and adorned with various inscriptions.

Thus far of the Colleges and Halls, which for the beauty of their buildings, their rich endowments, and copious Libraries, excell all the Academies in the Christian world. We shall add a little of the Academies themselves, and those that inhabit them.

These Students lead a life almost Monastic ; for as the Monks had nothing in the world to do, but when they had said their prayers at stated hours, to employ themselves in instructive studies, no more have these. They are divided into three Tables : The first is called the Fellows Table, to which are admitted Earls, Barons, Gentlemen, Doctors, and Masters of Arts, but very few of the latter ; this is more plentifully and expensively served than the others : The Second is for Masters of Arts, Bachelors, some Gentlemen, and eminent Citizens : The Third for people of low condition. While the rest are at dinner or supper in a great Hall, where they are all assembled, one of the Students reads aloud the Bible, which is placed on a desk in the middle of the Hall, and this office every one of them takes upon himself in his turn ; as soon as Grace is said after each meal, every one is at liberty, either to retire to his own chambers, or to walk in the College garden, there being none that

In an out part of the town are the remains of a pretty large fortification, but quite in ruins. We were entertained at supper with an excellent concert, composed of variety of instruments.

The next day we went as far as the Royal Palace of WOODSTOCK, where king Ethelred formerly held a Parliament, and enacted certain Laws. This palace abounding in magnificence was built by Henry I. to which he joined a very large park, enclosed with a wall, according to John Rolfe the first park in England. In this very palace the present reigning queen Elizabeth, before she was confined to the Tower, was kept prisoner by her sister Mary; while she was detained here in the utmost peril of her life, she wrote with a piece of charcoal the following verses, composed by herself, upon a window-shutter:

O FORTUNE! *how thy restless wavering state
 Hath fraught with cares my troubled wit!
 Witness this present prison whither Fate
 Hath born me, and the joys I quit.
 Thou causedest the guilty to be loosed
 From bands, wherewith are innocents inclosed;
 Causing the guiltless to be strait reserved,
 And freeing those that death had well deserved:
 But by her envy can be nothing wrought,
 So God send to my foes all they have thought.*

HENLEY,

Not far from this palace are to be seen near a spring of the brightest water the ruins of the habitation of Rosamond Clifford, whose exquisite beauty so entirely captivated the heart of king Henry II. that he lost the thought of all other women; she is said to have been poisoned at last by the Queen. All that remains of her tomb of stone, the letters of which are almost worn out, is the line on the opposite page. * * * *

The rhiming epitaph, following likewise on the opposite side, was probably the performance of some monk.

Returning from hence to Oxford, after dinner we proceeded on our journey, and passed through EWHELME, a Royal Palace, in which some alms-people are supported by an allowance from the crown.

WINDSOR, a Royal Castle, supposed to have been begun by king Arthur, it's buildings much encreased by Edward III. The situation is entirely worthy of being a royal residence, a more beautiful being scarce to be found: For from the brow of a gentle rising it enjoys the prospect of an even and green country; it's front commands a valley extended every way, and chequered with arable lands and pasturage, cloathed up and down with groves, and watered by that gentlest of rivers the Thames; behind rise several hills, but neither steep, nor very high, crowned with woods, and seeming designed by Nature herself for the purpose of hunting.

The kings of England, invited by the deliciousness of the place, very often retire hither; and here was born the conqueror of France, the glorious king Edward III. who built the Castle new from the ground, and throughly fortified it with trenches, and towers of square stone, and having soon after subdued in battle John king of France, and David king of Scotland, he detained them both prisoners here at the same time. This Castle besides being the royal palace, and having some magnificent tombs of the kings of England, is famous for the ceremonies belonging to the Knights of the Garter; this Order was instituted by Edward III. the same who triumphed so illustriously over John king of France. The Knights of the Garter are strictly chosen for their military virtues, and antiquity of family: They are bound by solemn oath and vow to mutual and perpetual friendship among themselves, and to the not avoiding any danger whatever, or even death itself, to support by their joint endeavours the honour of the Society: They are

The ceremonies of this Society are celebrated every year at Windsor on St. George's day, the tutelar Saint of the Order, the King presiding; and the custom is, that the Knights Companions should hang up their helmet and shield, with their arms blazoned on it, in some conspicuous part of the Church.

In this is the public kitchen, well furnished with proper utensils, besides a spacious dining-room, where all the poor Knights eat at the same table, for into this society of the Garter, the King and Sovereign elects, at his own choice, certain persons who must be gentlemen of three descents, and such as for their age and the straitness of their fortunes, are fitter for saying their prayers, than for the service of war; to each of them is assigned a pension of eighteen pounds per annum and cloaths; the chief institution of so magnificent a foundation is, that they should say their daily prayers to God for the King's safety, and the happy administration of the Kingdom, to which purpose they attend the service, meeting twice every day at Chapel. The left side of this court is ornamented by a most magnificent Chapel of one hundred and thirty-four paces in length, and sixteen in breadth; in this are eighteen seats

It receives from royal liberality the annual income of two thousand pounds, and that still much encreased by the munificence of Edward III. and Henry VII. The greatest Princes in Christendom have taken it for the highest honour to be admitted into the Order of the Garter; and since it's first institution about twenty Kings, besides those of England, who are the Sovereigns of it, not to mention Dukes and persons of the greatest figure, have been of it. It consists of twenty-six Companions.

In the inward Choir of the Chapel are hung up sixteen coats of arms, swords and banners, among which, are those of Charles V. and Rodolphus II. Emperors; of Philip of Spain; Henry III. of France; Frederic II. of Denmark, &c. of Casimir Count Palatine of the Rhine; and other Christian Princes, who have been chosen into this Order.

The second Court of Windsor Castle stands upon higher ground, and is enclosed with walls of great strength, and beautified with fine buildings, and a Tower; it was an ancient Castle, of which old annals speak in this manner; King Edward, A. D. 1359, began a new building in that part of the Castle of Windsor where he was born, for which reason he took care it should be decorated with larger and finer edifices than the rest; in this part were kept prisoners John king of France, and David king of Scots, over whom Edward triumphed at one and the same time: It was by their advice, struck with the advantage of it's situation, and with the sums paid for their ransom, that by degrees this Castle stretched to such magnificence, as to appear no longer a fortress, but a town of proper extent, and inexpugnable to any human force; this particular part of the Castle was built at the sole expence of the king of Scotland, except one Tower, which from it's having been erected by the Bishop of Winchester, Prelate of the Order,

The third Court is much the largest of any, built at the expence of the captive king of France; as it stands higher, so it greatly excels the two former in splendor and elegance; it has one hundred and forty-eight paces in length, and ninety-seven in breadth; in the middle of it is a fountain of very clear water, brought under ground at an excessive expence from the distance of four miles: Towards the East are magnificent apartments destined for the royal household; towards the West is a tennis-court for the amusement of the court; on the North side are the royal apartments, consisting of magnificent chambers, halls, and † bathing-rooms, and a private Chapel, the

From hence runs a walk of incredible beauty, three hundred and eighty paces in length, set round on every side with supporters of wood, which sustain a balcony, from whence the nobility and persons of distinction can take the pleasure of seeing hunting and hawking in a lawn of sufficient space ; for the fields and meadows clad with variety of plants and flowers, swell gradually into hills of perpetual verdure quite up to the Castle, and at bottom stretch out in an extended plain, that strikes the beholders with delight.

Besides what has been already mentioned, there are worthy of notice here two bathing-rooms, cieled and wainscotted with looking-glasses ; the chamber in which Henry VI. was born ; queen Elizabeth's bed-chamber, where

As we were returning to our inn, we happened to meet some country people celebrating their Harvest-home; their last load of corn they crown with flowers, having besides an image richly dressed, by which perhaps they would signify Ceres, this they keep moving about, while men and women, men and maid servants, riding through the streets in the cart, shout as loud as they can till they arrive at the barn: The farmers here do not bind up their corn in sheaves, as they do with us, but directly as they have reaped or mowed it, put it into carts, and convey it into their barns.

We went through the town of STAINES.

Area ipsa primaria lapide quadrato constrata est, in cujus centro fons salientis aquæ, coronâ deauratâ statuæ Justitiæ subpositâ tectus conspicitur, quam columnæ ex marmore albo & nigro sustinent. The cheif area is paved with square stone, in it's center is a fountain that throws up water, covered with a gilt crown, on the top of which is a statue of Justice, supported by columns of black and white marble. The Chapel of this palace is most splendid, in which the Queen's closet is quite transparent, having it's windows of chrystal. We were led into two chambers, called the presence, or chambers of audience, which shone with tapestry of gold and silver and silk of different colours; under the canopy of state are these words embroidered in pearl, Vivat Henricus Octavus. Here is besides a small Chapel richly hung with tapestry, where the Queen performs her devotions. In her bed-chamber the bed was covered with very costly coverlids of silk: At no great distance from this room we were shewn a bed, the teaster of which was worked by Anne Bullen, and

Here is besides a certain cabinet called Paradise, where besides that every thing glitters so with silver, gold and jewels, as to dazzle one's eyes, there is a musical instrument made all of glass, except the strings. Afterwards we were led into the gardens, which are most pleasant, here we saw rosemary so planted and nailed to the walls as to cover them entirely, which is a method exceeding common in England.

There is besides another pyramid of marble full of concealed pipes, which spirt upon all who come within their reach.

A SHORT
DESCRIPTION

BRITAIN, consisting of the two kingdoms of ENGLAND and SCOTLAND, is the largest island in the world, encompassed by the ocean, the German and French seas : The largest and Southern part of it is England,

Australior nunc Anglia, ab Anglis, qui ex provinciâ regni Daniæ, quæ hodiè Angel nuncupatur, progressi eam occupârunt, sic denominatæ, proprium habet Regem, qui præter Deum, superiorem non agnoscit. Divisa est regio in xxxix. Comitatus, quibus xiii. in Walliâ adjunxit Henricus VIII. Angliæ rex, qui primus eam regionem in Comitatus distribuit: In hisce Comitatus difficilioribus temporibus præfectus regius, quem Lieutenant vocant, ne quid detrimenti capiat respública, constituitur. Singulis verò annis nobilis quidam ex incolis præficitur, quem vice Comitum, quasi Comitum vicarium vocant; ejus est publicas pecunias provinciæ suæ conquirere, multas irrogatas, vel captis pignoribus colligere & ærario inferre; Judicibus præstò adesse, & eorum mandata exequi; duodecim viros cogere, qui in causis de facto cognoscunt, & ad Judices referunt (Judices enim in Anglia Juris solum, non facti, sunt Judices) condemnatos ad supplicium ducere & in minoribus litibus cognoscere; in majoribus autem judicunt Justitiiarii, quos olim itinerantes, nunc Justitios ad assisas vocant, qui quotannis land, so named from the Angli, who quitting the little territory yet called Angel in the kingdom of Denmark, took possession here. It is governed by it's own King, who owns no superior but God. It is divided into 39 Counties, to which 13 in Wales were added by Henry VIII. the first who distributed that Principality into Counties ; over each of these in times of danger a Lord Lieutenant, nominated by the King, presides with an unlimited power : Every year some gentleman, an inhabitant of the place, is appointed Sheriff, his office is to collect the public monies, to raise fines, or to make seizures, and account for it to the Treasury, to attend upon the Judges, and put their sentence in execution, to empannel the Jury, who sit upon facts, and return their verdict to the Judges, (who in England are only such of the Law, and not of the Fact) to convey the condemned to execution, and to determine in lesser causes ; for the greater are tried by the Judges, formerly called travelling Judges, now Judges of assize ; these go their circuits through the hos Comitatus bis obeunt, ut de caussis cognoscant, & de incarceratis sententiam ferant.

Quod ad Ecclesiasticam Jurisdictionem atinet; cum Romani Pontifices Ecclesias singulas singulis presbyteris assignassent, & parochias eis divisissent, Honorius Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis, circa annum à salute reparatà 636. Angliam primus in parochias distribuere cepit: Quemadmodum autem duas nunc Anglia habet Provincias, sic Archiepiscopus duos, Cantuariensem nimirum, totius Angliæ Primatem & Metropolitanum; & Eboracensem; quibus subsunt xxv. Episcopi; Cantuariensi xxii. Eboracensi tres reliqui.

Terra est frugifera, pecore maximè abundans, quo fit, ut incolæ quasi plures pecuarii, quàm aratores sint; quod magis fermè pabulo quàm arvo colendo studeant; sic ut tertia propemodum terræ pas tantùm pecori relicta sit inculta. Regio est quocunque anni tempore temperatissima, atque cæli nulla gravitas, adeò ut rari sint morbi, & inde minor medicinæ usus quàm alibi. Flumina hic admodum rara: Solum

Counties twice every year to hear causes, and pronounce sentence upon prisoners.

As to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, after the Popes had assigned a church and a parish to every Priest, Honorius Archbishop of Canterbury, about the year 636, began to divide England in the same manner into parishes: As it has two Provinces, so it has two Archbishops, the one of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitan of all England, the other of York; subject to these are 25 Bishops, viz. 22 to Canterbury, the remaining three to York.

The soil is fruitful, and abounds with cattle, which inclines the inhabitants rather to feeding than ploughing, so that near a third part of the land is left uncultivated for grazing. The climate is most temperate at all times, and the air never heavy, consequently maladies are scarcer, and less physic is used there than any where else. There are but few rivers: Though the soil is productive it bears no wine, but that want is supplied from abroad by the best kinds, as of Orleans, Gascon, Rhenish and Spanish. The general drink is beer, which is prepared from barley, and is excellently well tasted, but strong, and what soon fuddles. There are many hills without one tree, or any spring, which produce a very short and tender grass, and supply plenty of food to sheep, upon these wander numerous flocks, extremely white, and whether from the temperature of the air, or goodness of the earth, bearing softer and finer fleeces than those of any other country: This is the true Golden Fleece, in which consist the chief riches of the inhabitants, great sums of money being brought into the island by merchants, chiefly for that article of trade. The dogs here are particularly good. It has mines of gold, silver, and tin, (of which all manner of table utensils are made, in brightness equal to silver, and used all over Europe) of lead, and of iron, but not much of the latter: The horses are small but swift: Glass-houses are in plenty here.

Canes præstantissimos habet. Fert aurum, argentum, stannum, (ex quo vasa domestica ducta apud omnes Europæos in mensarum usu argenteis fulgore comparantur) plumbum & ferrum, sed ejus exigua copia: Equos parvos, sed celeres habet: Vitriariæ officinæ permultæ.

De MORIBUS ANGLORUM.

Sunt Angli graves ut Germani, magnifici domi forisque, magna affectantium famulorum agmina secum trahunt, quibus in sinistro brachio scuta ex argento facta appendunt, & non immeritò vexantur, illos caudas à tergo habere : In saltationibus & arte musicâ excellunt ; sunt enim agiles & alacres, licet crassiores corporibus quàm Galli ; mediam capitis partem capillos detondent, utroque latere illæso ; sunt boni nautæ & insignes pyratæ, astuti, fallaces, & furaces ; Londini singulis annis, ultra 300, sicuti vulgò fertur, suspenduntur ; decapitatio minoris apud ipsos est infamiæ, quàm strangulatio ; ire prope murum honoratior eis locus ; frequens falconum & accipitrum apud nobiles in venationibus usus ; in edendo civiliores Gallis, parcius utuntur pane, carnibus verò largius, quas optimè assant ; in potum copiosè immittunt faccarum ; tegumenta lectorum sunt tapetia, etiam apud rusticos ; laborant

Of the MANNERS of the ENGLISH.

The English are serious like the Germans, lovers of shew ; liking to be followed wherever they go by whole troops of servants, who wear their masters arms in silver, fastened to their left arms, a ridicule they deservedly lay under : They excell in dancing and music, for they are active and lively, though of a thicker make than the French ; they cut their hair close on the middle of the head, letting it grow on either side ; they are good sailors, and better pyrates, cunning, treacherous, and thievish ; above 300 are said to be hanged annually at London ; beheading with them is less infamous than hanging ; they give the wall as the place of honour ; hawking is the general sport of the gentry ; they are more polite in eating than the French, devouring less bread, but more meat, which they roast in perfection ; they put a great deal of sugar in their drink ; their beds are covered with tapestry, even those of farmers ; they are often frequenter leprâ, albâ vulgò dictâ, quam primis Normannorum temporibus in Angliam irrepsisse, fama est; in ædibus duas plærunque contignationes habent, excepto Londino, ubi tres rarò quatuor reperiuntur; ædificant ex ligno, vel, qui lautioris sunt fortunæ, ex coctis lateribus, tectâ habent depressiora, quæ ditiores plumbo tegunt.

Sunt potentes in præliis, undiquaque debellant adversarios, nullumque penitus patiuntur jugum servitutis; delectantur quoque valdè sonitibus, qui ipsis aures implent, uti explosionibus tormentorum, tympanis & campanarum boatu, ita ut Londini multi qui se inebriaverint turrem unam aut alteram, exercitii causa, ascendant, & per horas aliquot campanis signum dent. molested with the scurvy, said to have first crept into England with the Norman conquest; their houses are commonly of two stories, except in London, where they are of three and four, though but seldom of four; they are built of wood, those of the richer sort with bricks, their roofs are low, and where the owner has money, covered with lead.

They are powerful in the field, successful against their enemies, impatient of any thing like slavery; vastly fond of great noises that fill the ear, such as the firing of cannon, drums, and the ringing of bells, so that it is common for a number of them, that have got a glass in their heads, to go up into some belfry, and ring the bells for hours together, for the sake of exercise. If they see a foreigner, very well made or particularly handsome, they will say, It is a pity he is not an ENGLISHMAN.

Tho. Howard, filius secundo genitus Ducis Norfolcii, Baro Audley de Saffronwalden, jure materno.

† Gulielmus, tertius Norfolcii filius neque Baro est, neque adhuc natalibus restitutus.

Hactenus de Familiis illustribus.

Navigio Thamesi secundo LONDINO discessimus & GREENWICIAM, arcem regiam, à dextra reliquimus, de quâ supra.

BARCKING,

Baron Willoughby of Parham.

† Baron Pagett, in exile, attainted.

Baron Chandois. Baron St. John.

Baron Delaware, his ancestors took the king of France prisoner.

Baron Compton, has squandered almost all his substance.

Baron Norris.

Thomas Howard, second son of the Duke of Norfolk, Baron Audley of Saffronwalden, in his mother's right.

† William, third son of the Duke of Norfolk, is neither a Baron, nor yet restored in blood.

Thus far of noble Families.

We set out from LONDON in a boat, and fell down the river, leaving GREENWICH, which we have spoken of before, on the right hand.

BARKING,

BARCKING, vicus à finistrâ conspectus.

GRAVESENDA, Angliæ oppidulum portu commodo celebre, ad quod maximæ naves ex Belgio appellere solent. Hinc cum postridiè cymbâ progredieremur ulterius, prius nobiliss. Davidi Strzielæ Boëmo, & Thobiæ Salandro inspectori ipsius, nostris per Galliam & Anliam comitibus indivisis, qui per Belgium in patriam redire cogitabant, ultimum vale diximus, nobis rursus in Galliam contendentibus; Deus autem ter maximus voluntati ipsorum restitit; nam adhuc præsentibus nobis, optimum Strzielam diarrhæâ correptum, paucis post discessum nostrum diebus, uti ex literis Salandri postea percepimus, Londini febris ardens extinxit.

QUINCKBURG, Castellum à dextrâ vidimus; inde cum paulò ulterius effemus progressi, ostrea in ipso mari in nostro conspectu capiebantur, quæ alibi non delicatiora nec plura, teste Ortelio in Epitome theatri orbis terrarum in Angliâ.

WITZSTEFFEL,

BARKING, a town in sight on the left.

GRAVESEND, a small town, famous for the convenience of it's port, the largest Dutch ships usually call here. As we were to proceed farther from hence by water, we took our last leave here of the noble Bohemian David Strziela, and his tutor Tobias Salander, our constant fellow-travellers through France and England, they designing to return home through Holland, we on a second tour into France; but it pleased Heaven to put a stop to their design, for the worthy Strziela was seized with a diarrhea a few days before our departure, and as we afterwards learned by letters from Salander, died in a few days, of a violent fever in London.

QUEENBOROUGH; we left the Castle on our right; a little farther we saw the fishing of oysters out of the sea, which are no where in greater plenty or perfection; witness Ortelius in his Epitome, &c.

CANTUARIUM, ubi sedes Archiepiscopi & Primatis Angliæ est, oppidum pervetustum, Romanoque sæculo procul dubio illustre, quod aliàs etiam CANTUARIA, vulgò CANTERBURY dicitur, pedites venimus.

Duo sunt hic Monasteria penè contigua, Christi scilicet, & D. Augustini, utrumque aliquando Monachis ordinis D. Benedicti repletum; quorum alterum, Christi nomine obliterato, temporibus subsequentiùs D. Thomæ dedicatum est, situm quasi in medio oppidi sinu, & tantâ majestate cum duabus ingentibus turribus in cœlum se erigens, ut procul etiam intuentibus, quemadmodum Erasmus inquit, religionem incutiat.

In Choro templi istius, cujus ingressum cancelli ferrei prohibent, monumenta videntur sequentia :

WHITSTABLE, here we went ashore.

CANTERBURY, we came to it on foot; this is the seat of the Archbishop, Primate of all England, a very antient town, and without doubt of note in the time of the Romans.

Here are two Monasteries almost contiguous, namely of Christ and St. Augustine, both of them once filled with Benedictine Monks; the former was afterwards dedicated to St. Thomas Becket, the name of Christ being obliterated; it stands almost in the middle of the town, and with so much majesty lifts itself, and it's two towers, to a stupendous height, that, as Erasmus says, it strikes even those, who only see it at a distance, with awe.

In the Choir, which is shut up with iron rails, are the following monuments:

King Henry IV. with his wife Joan of Navarre, of white marble.

Nicolai Woltonis, qui fuit Confiliarius Henrici VIII. Edward VI. Mariæ & Elisabethæ, Angliæ regum & reginarum.

Edwardi Principis quondam tertii in Aquitaniâ, Ducis de Cornewolle & Comitis Cestriæ.

Reginaldi Poli, cum hâc inscriptione :

Depositum Reginaldi Poli, Cardinalis & Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis.

Cardinalis Chastillon.

Sellam deinde vidimus in quam collocari solent Episcopi, quando investuntur. In vestibulo Templi, quod est ad Austrum, in saxum incisi sunt tres armati, qui Thomam Becketum, Archiepiscopum Cantuariensem, ob martyrium inter Divos relatam, trucidarunt, additis his cognominibus,

We were then shewn the chair in which the Bishops are placed, when they are installed. In the vestibule of the church, on the South side, stand the statues of three men armed, cut in stone, who slew Thomas Becket Archbishop of Canterbury, made a Saint for this martyrdom ; their names are adjoined, Hic cum ambulando defessi, nos pane & cerevisiâ aliquantulum refecissemus, postea statim equos cursorios conscendimus, & secundâ aut tertiâ noctis horâ, in oppidum DUBRIM, vulgò DOVER, venimus. In viâ, quæ fatis erat aspera & periculosa, tale quid nobis accidit: Dux viæ, vulgò postillon, adolescens, ad globuli sclopetarii ictum, cum duobus ex nostris comitibus præcesserat; nos tardius insequendo socios nostros in tenebris è conspectu nostro amittimus; reperimus postea bivium; ad dextram locus erat declivis & palustris; ad sinistram colliculus; hic dum dubii, utra harum viarum eligenda sit, consultamus, ecce derepentè videmus à dextro latere equites quosdam, nostris quoad equos, quoad vestitum & staturam corporis omninò similes; qua propter lætabundi illos sequi statuimus; sed accidit, ut isti, Deo ita nos protegente, nobis inclamantibus nihil responderent, sed viam suam palustrem persequerentur adeò strenuè, ut singulus pedum positus, & ictus multæ comitentur flammæ igneæ; quæ res non immeritò nobis suspicionem movit de latronibus,

Being tired with walking, we refreshed ourselves here with a mouthful of bread, and some ale, and immediately mounted post-horses, and arrived about two or three o'clock in the morning at DOVER. In our way to it, which was rough and dangerous enough, the following accident happened to us: Our guide, or postilion, a youth, was before with two of our company, about the distance of a musket-shot, we by not following quick enough, had lost sight of our friends; we came afterwards to where the road divided, on the right it was down hill, and marshy, on the left was a small hill; whilst we stopped here in doubt, and consulted which of the roads we should take, we saw all on a sudden on our right-hand some horsemen, their stature, dress and horses, exactly resembling those of our friends, glad of having found them again, we determined to set on after them; but it happened through God's mercy, that though we called to them, they did not answer us, but kept on down the marshy road, at such a rate, that de quibus eramus admoniti, vel de spectris nocturnis potius, quæ, sicuti postea nobis quoque relatum est, in istis locis solent esse frequentia; accedebant ignes fatui magno numero, ita ut horrore vel stupore quodammodo concuterentur; verum factum est, ut paulo post viæ dux cornu signum daret, quo indicio, nos ad sinistram convertimus, & sic ad comites nostros salvi pervenimus; qui à nobis interrogati, num obvios habuissent istos, quos videramus, equites; responderunt, se neminem vidisse; variæ deinceps hæc de re, ut fieri solet, latæ sunt sententiæ; quicquid autem fit, certum profectò nobis imminebat periculum, à quo, quod sumus liberati, soli Deo tribuendum & ascribendum est.

Porrò Dubris Angliæ oppidum, quod inter cautes confidet (ubi portus ipse olim fuit, cum mare se infinuaret, uti ex anchoris, & navium tabulis erutis colligitur) portus opportunitate, quæ jam ferè nulla est, & in Galliam trajectu magis celebratur, quàm suâ vel elegantia vel frequentia. that their horses feet struck fire at every stretch, which made us with reason begin to suspect they were thieves, having had warning of such, or rather that they were nocturnal spectres, who as we were afterwards told, are frequently seen in those places, there were likewise a great many Jack-w'-a-lanterns, so that we were quite seized with horror and amazement!-----But fortunately for us, our guide soon after sounded his horn, and we following the noise, turned down the left-hand road, and arrived safe to our companions, who when we had asked them, If they had not seen the horsemen who had gone by us? Answered, not a soul: Our opinions according to custom were various upon this matter; but whatever the thing was, we were without doubt in imminent danger, from which that we escaped, the glory is to be ascribed to God alone.

Dover, situated among cliffs, (standing where the Port itself was originally, as may be gathered from Anchors, and parts of vessels dug up there) is more famous for the convenience of it's port, which indeed is now much decayed, and it's passage to France, than for either it's elegance, or populousness; this passage the most used, and the shortest, is of thirty miles, which with a favourable wind may be run over in five or six hours time, as we ourselves experienced; some reckon it only eighteen to Calais, and to Boulogne sixteen English miles, which as Ortelius says in his Theatrum, are longer than the Italian.

Here was a church dedicated to St. Martin, by Victred king of Kent, and a house belonging to the Knights Templars; of either there are now no remains: It is the seat of a Suffragan to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who when the Archbishop is employed upon business of more consequence, manages the ordinary affairs, but does not interfere with the Archiepiscopal jurisdiction. Upon a hill, or rather rock, which on it's right side is almost every where a precipice, a very extensive Castle rises to a surprizing height, in size like a little city, extremely well fortified, and thick set with towers, and seems to threaten the sea beneath : Matthew Paris calls it, the door and key of England ; the ordinary people have taken it into their heads, that it was built by Julius Cæsar, it is likely it might by the Romans, from those British bricks in the Chapel, which they made use of in their foundations : See Cambden's Britannia.
